MANY MEN VOLUNTEER FOR SERVICE

Many Local Young Men Enlist in Medicine Hat For Active Service

100 Men and 2 Officers Have Been Recruited at Med. Hat

Quite a number to the local Co.'y. of the 1st S. A. R. have volunteered for service among the 100 men recruited under Captains Jack McQueen and Bruce McKenzie at Medicine Hat and have left for Calgary.

The following local men are among the volunteers: John Palmer, Jack McQueen, Arthur Harris, Ted Harris, Oswald Green, George Kitchen, Tommy Kwanick, Gordon Newnam, Iruce Collard, Bill Shaw, John Rose, Norris Lawson, Ted Lawson, Ted Maskell, Tom Jones.

Harold Leaning and Jim Dutton were among the volunteers but were turned down on account of defective vision.

As we go to press we learn that the following have volunteered and been accepted: J. Houghton, Jim Jackson, T. Fairhurst. The following have been rejected: T. Jones, Jim Louney, A. Hurlburt, W. Hurlburt, C. McGlinchey, M. Waslesky, J. Groves.

No Boy Scouting Is Allowed in Germany

Scouting Stands for Law, Order, Fairness Democracy Christianity

The Boy Scout movement upholds law and order; the development of the way of thought implied in such words as fairness, democracy and Christianity.

For that reason the Boy Scout movement is not wanted in Italy and Germany. For that reason the Boy Scout movement is now to be abolished in Bolivia, and replaced with military training of all Bolivian boys and girls between the ages of 15 and 20.

That does not hurt the Scout movement. It has no intention of deviating from the lines it has followed for over 30 years, which have won it the youth of thirty countries all over the world (almost 100,000 in Canada alone; a million in the United States).

"Patriotism," Edith Cavell is reported to have said, "is not enough." It may be enough for the youth of Germany and Italy (and now of Bolivia), but it is not enough for the Scout movement, which is truly international in its composition and outlook.

Just how international, has been shown by the great Jamboree in England, Holland and Switzerland, where Scouts from China, Texas, India and France found a common meeting ground. Scouts from Germany and Italy used to attend these Jamborees in the pre-Hitler days. In the pre-Hitler days, too, it was common for English Scouts to go touring in Germany, where they were royally welcomed. But no more.

Under the watchful eye of

Voluntary Registration of Women Invited

Women Asked to Give Services in National Emergencies

The project for the Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women (V. R. C. W.) arose out of discussions by a group of women who were interested in questions of defence. They were convinced that something ought to be done to insure that in the event of a crisis women willing to serve their country would be put to the tasks for which they were trained and qualified, and that a record of their willingness to serve, their training and their qualifications ought to be made now so as to be readily available in the event of such an emergency.

A canvass of the heads of women's organizations in Canada bore out not only their capability but their willingness to undertake the work of registration. A questionnaire which would elicit the sort of information which would be valuable in the case of a crisis, has been prepared, and registration booths will be set up in every community to which the women of the district will be invited to come to register.

Recreation and Health As in Canada Today

VAULTING

Vaulting, with and without a springboard has proven to be one of the most popular activities in our Provincial Recreational Centers, as it is adaptable to beginners as well as being a real test of the advanced gymnast.

Vaulting comprises a sequence of movements which have to be closely co-ordinated in speed, timing and force. It is primarily developing for the leg muscles, but co-ordination, strength, control and grace in general are also developed, and in the slightest (I use the word landing) the gymnast gets a wonderful training in balance.

The difference in physical abilities is more pronounced in vaulting than in any other apparatus work, and vaulting is therefore an excellent means of grading the members in groups according to their abilities.

Vaulting with high adjustable apparatus is very adaptable; for men and women alike and for school boys and girls, and it should be encouraged wherever possible. The activity is widely used in the school gymnasiums in Europe, and it is an activity which particularly appeals to the younger element.

Meeting To Discuss Electricity Called Off

Due to Present Conditions Was Poorly Attended

On account of the poor attendance caused by the excitement over the War situation, the meeting called for Tuesday evening to discuss the electricity referendum was called off. Due to the lack of time before the election, another meeting will not be called.

Local Militia Holds Send-Off For Members

Smoker Enjoyed by Boys On Eve Of Departures For Service

C. Co.'y. held a Send-Off in the Armoury last night in honor of the men who are leaving tonight for Calgary. Toasts were drunk to the King, Canada, Capt. J. R. Mackenzie, who is in charge of the local unit, Lieut. T. Knight and to the boys who were leaving. A smoker and sing-song was enjoyed by all.

No Election To Be Held For Council or School Board

Only Two Nominees; Elected By Acclamation

No election for Councillor or School Trustee will be necessary next Monday, Sept. 11th.

The only nominee for the Council on Tuesday, Nomination Day, was Mr. R. Phillips, who therefore declared elected by acclamation.

The same thing happened in regard to the election of a school trustee. Mr. A. J. Learmonth being the only nominee for the office was also declared elected by acclamation.

The only matter, therefore, to be voted upon is the question of whether Redcliff citizens want electricity in Redcliff or not.

Local Man Weds At Calgary on Saturday

Selhorn Sheldon

A wedding of interest to Redcliff friends took place in Calgary on Saturday September 2nd when Miss Ruth Sheldon, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Sheldon of Edmonton, became the wife of Mr. Wm. Selhorn, only son of Mrs. L. Selhorn, of Redcliff and the late Mr. Ernest Selhorn.

The marriage ceremony was performed in St. George's United Church by the Rev. Dr. Paton, in the presence of Miss Margaret Gallagher and Mr. Gordon Wooding both of Calgary.

The young couple left Saturday evening for Banff and other western points for a brief honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Selhorn will reside in Redcliff.

NOTICE

It would be greatly appreciated if any having magazines to spare would leave them at the local armory for the use of the Home Guard. The Boys.

Hitler and Mussolini, young children march, salute, use toy guns, sport daggers and gas masks. They learn to hate other nations. That is not, can never be, the way of Scouting.

It is not, you will note that Scouting has died in these countries; the nature of the movement is to grow vigorously. It has been abolished by official decree. Because something was wrong about the movement? Or that something was wrong about the country that abolished it? The answer stands out with unmistakable clarity.

POLAND'S BIG THREE IN EUROPE'S PRESENT CRISIS

Here are three Polish leaders in the current crisis: Ignace Moscicki, President of Poland (in light suit); Marshal Edward Smigly Rydz, inspector general of the army and "strong man" in the nation (in uniform); and Colonel Josef Beck, Foreign Minister, key man in the present crisis.

Centralization v. Decentralization

What is best for Canada—greater centralization of government than already exists or, a larger measure of decentralization of administration? The foregoing question is one which is occupying a good deal of attention in the minds of the people of this country. It is a question which has a great many facets and one in which there is room for a great deal of honest difference of opinion, one of the reasons why it is assuming a good deal of prominence.

It is also a question about which there is a good deal of loose thinking and consequently, loose talking. It is a problem, however, which should, and must, be faced squarely and about which no snap judgment should be rendered in the popular mind, since the whole future destiny of the country depends upon the answer.

In this country there are two schools of thought, representing divergent viewpoints and they are represented both in Eastern and Western Canada, with the general trend of thought in the former, as expressed in public print, inclined to support more centralization of power in Ottawa.

There are those who contend that Canada, with its federal government, its nine provincial governments, its multiplicity of rural and urban municipalities and numerous minor local authorities with their satellite boards and commissions is very much overgoverned for a country with a population of about eleven millions to support them and their lawless. It is thought that if some of these governmental groups were abolished or curtailed in number with their jurisdiction wholly or partially transferred to the remaining governmental groups, it would result in better government at less cost. They argue, doubtless with some justification, that fewer governments in the field with power to exact taxation would result in less overlapping, greater efficiency and more economy in the expenditure of money. They argue, doubtless with some justification, that fewer governments in the field with power to exact taxation would result in less overlapping, greater efficiency and more economy in the expenditure of money.

Decentralization Argument

On the other hand, the advocates of continuance of the status quo, or even an extension of decentralization maintain, also perhaps not without some justification, that greater centralization of authority would result in the building up of a bureaucratic system in the course of time, become dictatorial in its attitude towards the needs and aspirations of the common people; that long range government by remote control is impractical in a country of such vast geographic expanse and wide range of different economic conditions as Canada, because of the difficulty, if not impossibility, of central government catering to local requirements and of taking into consideration local conditions and requirements; that the maintenance of any curtailment of local self government, constitutes a weakening of the democratic form of government, on the ground that local self government is the keystone in the arch of democracy.

Indeed as Western Canada is concerned, opponents of greater centralization of government further contend that if a greater measure of authority were vested in Ottawa, it would tend to militate against the interests of the west just so long as representation in the federal parliament and the voting power of the people in the east is greater than that of the west.

If the premises of both schools of thought can be accepted as fundamental and factual, the issue then boils itself down to this: Do the people of this country seek more efficient and more economical but perhaps less considerate government or, are they willing to pay the price of a full measure of freedom and of close access to those who represent them, together with the greater responsiveness to their demands and requests which naturally goes with accessibility.

United Canada Angle

Then, of course, there is the question of Canadian unity of thought and purpose—a question which looms prominently at a time when dictator nations constitute a threat to the continuance of the democratic form of government. This, too, is a very important phase of the question of centralization versus decentralized administration and one which cannot be overlooked when this question is under consideration. It is an issue born of the international as well as the national and local conditions which affect the present day and probably the future welfare of Canada.

What the concrete outcome of the discussions of the highly important and difficult problem will be, it is impossible to predict at this stage. That there will be some measure of realignment of authority and jurisdiction is to be expected. Perhaps some middle course will be found which will result in greater economy and efficiency throughout the entire structure of government without loss of any of the individual liberties and privileges of accessibility which the people of this country presently enjoy.

The question is one which the people of the country must ultimately determine for themselves and in view of its great importance it predicated the exercise of much care and thought if the right answer is to be given and the solution most beneficial to the people of the country as a whole is to be found and applied.

Light Filter Tested

Makes Headlights On Motor Cars Invisible From Air

A special filter, which makes driving without lights unnecessary in so air raid, underwent a successful test by A.R.P. officials at Brighton, Eng. Officials riding in an eight-engine plane at altitudes of between 700 and 2,000 feet over the shoreline airport at night, tried in vain to detect the headlights of four cars below them.

The filter acts in such a way, it is said, that while sufficient light is given to drive by, no beam can be seen from above.

A Simple Home Treatment

The worst varicose veins, which have been made much worse by the use of bandages and stockings, can be healed much more quickly, if you use the simple home treatment which is described in this booklet. It is a simple, safe, and effective treatment, and it is the only one that has been proved to be successful. It is the only one that has been proved to be successful. It is the only one that has been proved to be successful.

A Mistaken Tradition

Drowning Persons Can Sink More Than Three Times

"Two struggling girls locked in each other's light embrace, were rescued from the Holland River after sinking for the third time." This extract from an eastern paper shows the difficulty in disposing of an old tradition or legend, says the Post-Arthur News-Chronicle. There is no basis of fact for the assumption that drowning persons always sink three times. They may sink only once, or if they sink twice or three times to rise again, because of their struggles, they may do so four or more times. It all depends on the circumstances.

An Interesting Test

Shows Men Tied To Loose Hearing Sooner Than Women

One person to every five defective hearing, a preliminary analysis of more than three-quarters of a million individual tests by the Bell Telephone Laboratories revealed.

Hearing becomes less acute with age and men tend to become hard of hearing sooner than women, the tests also show.

The higher tones are lost first, but there are the ones not used in conversation. One person in twenty-five had trouble hearing speeches and one in his line ordinary conversation difficult to follow.

The tests show that there is no difference between tests taken in the morning and those taken at night. Laboratory scientists were a little surprised at this fact, because it indicated fatigue does not dull hearing.

Already more than 500,000 have taken the tests in New York and more than 200,000 in San Francisco.

During the test, a person listens with a telephone receiver to scientific adjustments of tones of various pitches that grow fainter until the point is reached where the listener can no longer hear the tones.

Each listener makes a record of his hearing by writing numbers on a specially prepared form. An attendant then puts a check on the form that indicates age-group, sex and race and runs it through a machine that automatically photographs it.

Fickle Appetite

South African Estate Goes And Safety

A Durban, South Africa, team recently entertained a "human octopus."

He was J. Coetzee of Christiana, Transvaal. Mr. Coetzee walked into the team and asked for tea and sandwiches. When he was served with these he asked for glass.

The proprietor thought he was mad, but gave him one old electric light bulb.

Mr. Coetzee broke these up and ate them. He wanted more and more of them with sandwiches and tea. He then had some more glass and a safety razor blade.

He finished his tea by sending an eight-light bulb between his teeth. He claimed that this was good exercise for the jaws.

It is said he had been eating glass since he was three, yet had never suffered any trouble. When he was in his mother's kitchen he ate the mother for eating all the tumbler in the house.

Cannot Be Explained

Unless Taken For Stroll Chinese Canary Will Not Sing

"It is an unexplained but undeniable fact that the Chinese canary—that appears no different to others of the breed—refuses to sing unless taken for its evening stroll," declares Walter H. Harris, former London Times correspondent. In the public places of Peking can be seen the Chinese canaries in the hands of their owners, mostly of good condition, perched their canaries in carefully shrouded cages.

It might be thought that the fact that the cages are covered and the bird unable to enjoy the scene around, would act as a deterrent to the songster, but no. Perhaps it is the gentle soothing slow swing of the owner's walk, or gratitude for the trouble he is taking. Whatever the cause, the bird, silent during the promenade, will repay his master in melody at home.

Gift From Officers

Silver Rose Bowl Presented To Lady Patricia Ramsey

Colonel Hamilton Gault presented Lady Patricia Ramsey with a silver rose bowl on behalf of past and present officers of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, on the 25th anniversary of formation of the regiment.

Colonel Gault, then of Montreal and now residing in England, raised and equipped the famous regiment in the first few days of the Great War. It was named after Princess Patricia, who at that time was living at Hildon Hall, Ottawa, where her father, the Duke of Connaught, was governor-general.

Just His Bad Luck

"The almonds of life come to those who have no teeth," says an old adage, and A. E. Macdonald of Mount Forest, Ont., has evidence to prove it. At a draw held in conjunction with the record carnival, Mr. Macdonald won a permanent wave. But the days when he might have appreciated it are gone, perhaps forever. He is bald.

But Man Won While Instead Of Shotgun He Ordered

Twenty-five years ago Max Bachum sat down to write a couple of letters. One was a message to his sweetheart. The other was an order for a 12-gauge shotgun.

He received a reply to the love note from the Chicago mail order house where he had intended to buy the shotgun. He liked the letter from the girl clerk who wrote the reply.

He answered her. That started a regular correspondence.

Finally Bachum went to Chicago, called the mail order house, and told the girl. They have now celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary on a farm near Weatherford, Okla.

In all those 25 years Mr. Bachum has heard nothing more about the order for the shotgun.

Presbyterian Church in Ontario Ties Stride To Ancient Rites

A Presbyterian church and congregation in South Kings, Bruce county, Ont., are strictly preserving the ancient Scottish ways of worship.

A mile north of Lucknow, situated on a hill, is a white brick church, where no organ has ever sounded and no hymns have ever been sung. Only psalms and other words of scripture are sung.

John Macdonald, handy to his friends, has been preacher of Kinross church for 58 years and says he is the only man performing this church duty in Canada. He is 73.

Sandy still works in the fields and recalls it was back in 1861, when he was only 15, the congregation needed a preacher, which he explains was the rule in all Presbyterian churches back in Scotland, leading the song service.

In 1855, when the Scots founded South Kings, it was with the agreement of the old customs and rules of the Scottish Presbyterians would be retained.

Rev. G. M. Young is minister and in the cemetery nearby is a monument, believed to be the only one in Ontario made of iron. It is to the memory of Rev. Alexander MacKenzie, who died Nov. 15, 1894, aged 75.

The church is supported by 45 Scottish families.

Men Under Arms

Number Of Soldiers In Europe Estimated To Be Eight And A Half Millions

Europe's men under arms, exclusive of naval and air forces, were estimated at 8,500,000 by a military writer for Reuters News Agency.

The writer concluded that there appeared to be "a fairly even balance" at the moment between the land forces of the Roman-British and the British-French front and associated powers.

The breakdown of the estimates: France, 1,000,000; Britain, 600,000; Poland, 500,000; Turkey, 300,000; Roumania, 274,000; and Greece, 200,000, total, 2,874,000.

The Roman-British axis: Italy, 950,000; Germany, 1,750,000; total, 2,700,000 or 1,900,000 if 200,000 is added for Hungary.

Segregated were figures of 150,000 for Spain and 300,000 for Yugoslavia. In still another bystander or neutral category were 400,000 for Bulgaria, Belgium, the Balkans, The Netherlands, Portugal and Switzerland.

The review concluded: "The biggest counterweight is naturally Soviet Russia, whose 2,000,000 men would give a marked predominance to any group with which they made common cause."

WAR

The thing we feared has come upon us.

Britain has declared war on Germany. WAR—with all its possibilities and possibilities.

Sunday, September 3rd, was the saddest day we have known since August 1914 when that other awful catastrophe was launched.

There might be some excuse for it if, at its conclusion right would prevail. But war, like fast fighting never has proved which side is right; it only proves which side is the stronger.

It is deplorable that war is not to be avoided after all our boasted education and efforts to bring about international peace, but it seems that there is no alternative. Civilization is still in swaddling clothes. Since Britain is at war, Canada is at war, and therefore Alberta is at war. We have no choice.

Hitler, the arch madman, must be checked in his wild career, or those things for which our fathers died, life liberty and the pursuit of happiness will vanish from the earth.

There is no happiness apart from freedom. Freedom is the sure heritage of those alone who have the courage to defend it.

Redcliff's Shortage of Houses.

There is a great shortage of houses in Redcliff at the present time. Suitable dwelling houses are as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth, and many of the small shacks which used to serve have been removed to country points and farm homes.

But now that Redcliff is headed in the right direction, with our fine new park, swimming pool and the hard surfacing and electricity just around the corner, as it were, we feel it will not be long before some enterprising citizen will build some nice stucco covered bungalows of modern design on the properties facing the Park.

Under the building arrangements which can be made with the Federal Government at present, the building of such houses should be a comparatively easy matter.

The many young people of our town who have recently taken on the responsibilities of married life, are handicapped from the outset by not being able to at least rent that little rose covered cottage they have been dreaming about. Instead of a pleasant garden to work in, they must be content with a lone geranium in a pot on the window sill, and in place of a cosy house with several rooms they must substitute an all-purpose single room, or two under the same roof with others who are not as considerate of young people as they might be.

Apart from these handicaps to which the young people are subjected, many people who are working in Redcliff are living in Medicine Hat because of the shortage of houses here. This is not good business for Redcliff, and will not tend to build up a better community here.

Twenty Years After

Editor Redcliff Review:—In your Thursday issue, August 31, I read a review of H. G. Wells' new book "The Fate of Man" in which he takes a pessimistic view of civilized (?) man, and with good reason he might do so. What a disgusting and horrid picture of our civilization is displayed in Europe to-day! It is apparent that our education has failed, and hence, our otherwise admirable modern inventions have proved a curse to humanity rather than a blessing.

A host of statesmen, writers and educators, have, for the last twenty years, tried hard, with all their wits, to salvage the world and bring peace; but with not any results whatever; on the contrary, we are going from bad to worse.

Human ingenuity and wisdom have proved to be insufficient.

We are failing because we lack religion; these last generations have come into the habit of looking to science for everything, with the result that God and eternity have almost vanished from our thoughts and lives. How foolish this is! Our lives are from God; and it is only religion that can teach us to live wisely and right; if we have religion we feel humiliated when we fail—and we turn to God for help; there is strength in that.

What to have religion is, may be illustrated by taking notice of the Salvation Army activities, the world over. These people are humbly and quietly working for the welfare of others; they are honest and unselfish; this is charity, the Christian charity and faith which are sorely lacking in the world today.

Even Mr. Wells admits that man's present mental organization is insufficient to control the existing situation. Of course it is.

Man needs God and religion. Only the power that gave us life can give us wisdom, and a new will; and God is a generous giver of such a heart if we intensely will and pray for it.

Our education has failed because we left religion and God out of it.

O.V.

ELECTRICITY

The citizens of Redcliff will be called upon on Sept. 11th to make a definite decision regarding electricity in town.

It may be impossible at the present time for many to afford this new service but by supporting the plan at the polls they will benefit every citizen.

It is impossible for a town of this size to enjoy many services without electric power. With it, all the businesses in town would be able to give better service. The doctor, dentist, barber etc. could make full use of more modern equipment.

Our street lighting problem would be simplified and it would be much easier to illuminate our skating rink, swimming pool and bowling greens.

The electricity question deserves the full support of every Redcliff citizen. Be sure to go out to vote on Monday Sept. 11.

AT THE PARK

Take a stroll to the Park and notice the mass of bloom surrounding the centrepiece at present. Thanks to the Park Committee and in a very special way to Mrs. A. Matland and Mr. A. R. Oaklandour War Dead have been specially remembered this year after twenty years of what only seemed forgottenness.

While you are at the Park, look at the new dressing rooms building. It is fast nearing completion and reflects great credit upon the designers and workmen who are responsible for its erection.

There is every indication that the Federal and Provincial elections will be postponed owing to the turn of affairs in Europe. Political Differences are trifles in comparison with the common danger to our national life and liberty.

Canadian Pacific

Winnipeg lies in the middle of the North American Continent; midway between the Arctic and the Gulf of Mexico, and the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. Four great railways converge upon her, as did the historic roads leading to Rome. Her immense railway yards cover miles of tracks and sheds. Manitoba has been always before the eyes of the world—first as a romantic frontier, then as the possessor of fabulous wealth, then as the home of an industrious population that wrested from the soil, the lakes, the forests, and the mines, an immense annual income. In 1936 she produced $254,000,000 in her varied activities; agriculture, mining, forestry, trapping, fisheries (don't forget her Lake Winnipeg that measures 8,500 square miles), exporting a million and a half tons of these various commodities, which include pulpwood, dressed beef and sawpiles, to home and foreign markets. An amazing record! She has 80,000 registrations for motor vehicles and machines of all kinds, and 35,000 miles of highways and roads, of which she is supplying additional miles every year. Tourists in motor cars and by train are coming in increasing numbers to see for themselves this great country. Visit her yards. See wheat, all other grains, cattle (alive and as dressed beef), pulpwood, newspaper—many other products for which hungry mouths of men and machinery wait in the industrialized East. See the sons of British Columbia, Idaho and salmon being unloaded for Manitoba's own consumption. Thus, the sale of Manitoba's products allows her to purchase those of sister provinces. Annexation Of Yukon

British Columbia Premier Would Like To Extend Boundaries North
Annexation of the Yukon Territory by British Columbia would result in extension of the district to an extent hitherto undreamed of, Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia said in an interview at Toronto.

The Yukon is situated in every respect to the northern frontier of British Columbia and its annexation would permit a more direct administration of its affairs than is possible from Ottawa. Economically, British Columbia and the Yukon form an entity.

Mr. Pattullo did not know "whether we will be given permission to take over the Yukon." He said action on the matter has been postponed until after publication of the Howell commission report on dominion-provincial relations.

"But it is still definitely a live issue," he added. "The Yukon has a great future ahead of it as a gold-producing country."

Mr. Pattullo, who has sat in the British Columbia legislature for over 25 years, said he is interested in the Yukon's possibilities because he knows the district so well from his early political days.

"I spent 11 years in the Yukon," said the premier. "In fact, my first political venture occurred there about 35 years ago when I was elected alderman in Dawson. So naturally I'm interested in it."

Turning to a discussion of the proposed British Columbia-Alaska highway, Premier Pattullo said the Yukon with British Columbia would simplify arrangements for construction of the road.

"Lots of Americans would use the road and have new money with us," he said. "Building the road would mean employment for Canadians, and while men are working on its construction they could study to become first-class prospectors before the gold is depleted."

Girls Run Fishing Boat

Have Been Support Of Family During Father's Illness
Lake Michigan's commercial fishermen, who pride themselves on following one of the United States' most hazardous occupations, have been surprised to find that there are girls who can haul a net with the best of them.

Every day since early May three Michigan girls have been plying a "rodster" to the fishing grounds and returning each evening with from 100 to 200 pounds of fish. The crew is captained by Oddie Strayer, 18. Her sister Betty, scarcely 14, handles the 27-horse boiler's gasoline engine, and another sister, Dorothy, 12, is the factotum. The girls call themselves "The Strayer Fish Company."

Their daily catches provide the only income for the Strayer family since Charles C. Strayer, veteran White Lake fisherman, was forced to go west for his health. The girls say they are more than breaking even.

If we catch 100 pounds of fish each trip, we'll be broke next fall," Oddie said. They start out around 5 a.m., and don't return until 7 or 8 p.m. — and even then other fishermen keep a watchful eye on the girls, but admit they handle their craft expertly.

No Real Victims

Another War Would Mean Suffering And Misery For All Nations
Prime Minister Chamberlain made a statement of evident personal importance when he said in the House of Commons:

"There will be no victims in the next war. If war comes, victor and vanquished alike will suffer suffering and misery. I do not think that great, profound and fundamental truth is beginning to get into the minds of rulers and people alike."

It is no that belief that I have my hope that we may get rid of a way to escape from the present nightmare and come once again into the sunlight of peace."

There are growing evidences that the totalitarian overtones, Hitler and Mussolini, have begun to sense this "great, profound and fundamental truth" of which Mr. Chamberlain speaks; and if they have, they can scarcely fail to see the likelihood that, with or without the aid of a great devastating war will mean the end of their power. If they win, they still will lose. —Detroit Free Press.

Improved Strain Of Rye

University Of Saskatchewan Makes Important Announcement
Fifteen years of breeding and selection work with fall rye at the University of Saskatchewan have been rewarded with the production of an improved strain of Dakota variety rye.

Professor J. B. Harrington of the university field husbandry department announced that distribution of the new strain, known as Dakota "23", would be started almost immediately.

The seven acres devoted to production of the strain this year yielded almost 44 bushels per acre. This was about nine per cent. higher than the ordinary Dakota which is grown extensively in Saskatchewan. In addition to this, the new rye is more uniform than the ordinary strain.

Approximately 150 bushels of Dakota "23" will be available to members of the Saskatchewan Field Husbandry Association. Amounts available to each grower will necessarily be small. It is the hope of the university that competent seed men will increase the samples and that within a few years the new strain will replace the old.

Professor Harrington explained that because of the northern part of the agricultural area should see fall rye immediately, and that in the south of the province, seed in the fall should not be later than Sept. 15. Mr. Harrington said:

Original Type Of Pictures

Have Collection Of Fabric Monies On Display In London
Most original exhibits in Bond street to-day is the collection of fabric monies made by Mrs. Mary Irene, says a writer in the London Daily Mail. Based on the technique of stained glass, rare and beautiful ailes are interest in the same way and set in a paste on wood. Faces are painted in water-color on deep-tinted crepe-de-chine.

Mrs. Ireland, formerly an artist in stained glass, became seriously ill through inhaling fumes of hydrofluoric acid used for etching. She had to give up her job. The idea of her present pictures came during convalescence. Now she lectures on stained glass. Recently an inquiry came from India, to know whether she would give the writer a postal instruction course!

Mrs. Ireland, besides haunting archaeological shops throughout Great Britain in search of materials for her pictures, also collects rare embroidery and fabrics as well as old wood. Blondes predominate in her work, because it is so difficult to find a dark shade which gives the effect of brunettes hair. Gold brocade and purple satin render perfectly the sheen of fair hair.

She is so good that she is no technically difficult that up to now she has escaped imitations.

New Citizens Were Gracious

Offered To Buy An American Flag For Philadelphia Court
Federal Judge Harry E. Kalodner of Philadelphia was embarrassed when a Russian woman who had just received their citizenship papers offered to buy an American flag for the court's courtroom.

The six "new-born" Americans—three Italian, two Czech and one Russian—had noticed that the courtroom was without a flag and told Judge Kalodner:

"We are so happy to become Americans that we thought your honor wouldn't mind if we put a little money together to buy a flag for your courtroom."

Judge Kalodner replied:

"This is a fine gesture on your part. I am sure you will find it proper for a rich nation to allow you to spend your money for something it should buy."

"I thank you deeply, but please keep your money. I am sure you are going to prove true and valuable citizens and come once again into the sunlight of peace."

The judge immediately announced a court sale and ordered him to purchase a flag.

A New Royal Train

When King and Queen traveled to London for their summer holiday it was the last trip of the 36-year-old London Midland and Scottish Railway Royal train. It will be succeeded by a new streamlined, air-conditioned train with separate coaches for the King, Queen and each of the Princesses. The King will also have a special study.

Over three million and a half pounds of timothy need were imported into Canada from the United States during the eleven months July 1, 1933, to June 1, 1934.

ROYAL SMILES AT SWIMMING GALA

"Double up, you're with the Navy" is what the King said to Princess Margaret Rose, referring to their somewhat cramped quarters, as Their Majesties and the little Princess watched a swimming gala at the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth. The King and Queen appear to be highly amused at something going on in the tank.

Pruning Shade Trees

Best Time For Pruning Is In The Autumn
Trees in the prairie shelter belt are allowed to grow naturally. Trees used for shade on grounds, driveways or streets usually require pruning, depending upon kind of trees and their location, states G. D. Matthews, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Sask.

The most satisfactory time to prune shade trees is in the autumn after the leaves have fallen. Pruning of the bottom branches to a sufficient height should be done where it is desirable to eliminate excessive collection of snow and to prevent children swinging on them. Branches must be cut close and parallel to the trunk to facilitate healing. On heavy branches, a saw-cut should be made at the bottom, about eight inches from the trunk, to prevent stripping off bark or a portion of the tree when the limb falls. The stub can be removed close to the trunk and paralleled without causing damage. Else require to be headed sufficiently low to avoid damage by high winds on the prairie. In young trees a sturdy centre growth must be maintained. Desired shape and fitting can usually be obtained by pruning branches back to a bud pointing in the desired direction.

Protection of wounds made on the trunk of trees is always desirable. Stubs should be brushed to as well as possible, before any disinfectant or waterproof material is applied. A suitable coating is a thick mixture of white lead and linseed oil, shaded to match the colour of the bark.

Science Explains

Why Snow Storm Occurred Inside Phase White Star Was Sinking
Navy officials in Washington received a report recently of a snow storm inside a glass while the ship was at 9,000 feet.

The crew of one of the navy's giant FIVE-4 patrol bombers took flight from its Seattle, Wash. base on a routine training flight. The plane rose to 9,000 feet where the pilot noticed a sudden drop in temperature. Soon, white particles began to drift about inside the plane. Outside the sun was shining, but the pilot finally realized that he was in the midst of a snowstorm—inside his plane. Scientific explanation: The sudden drop in temperature had quickly condensed the moisture in the plane's atmosphere to form tiny snowflakes which swirled about the cabin.

Meteorists never should use high pressure hose on the body of an automobile when washing it.

Saw Royalty Tied

Indian Chief Herry He Could Not Talk To King George
Chief Walking Eagle, of the Stony Indians, who went to Calgary to see King George and Queen Elizabeth and return north to Edmonton, to catch another glimpse of Their Majesties on their return from the coast six days later, is sorry he didn't get a few private words with the King.

Walking Eagle wrote His Majesty last summer asking the royal hands on the Kootenay Plains west of the Rockies to be his tribe. Although the Stoney belong to the Morley reserve they have always refused to have their name put on a list to live there.

"I think King George would have fixed it for me, if the big bosses had let me talk to him alone," the chief said.

However, Chief Walking Eagle was delighted to have seen the royal couple twice. The chief said his wife refused to accompany him to the coast, a new husband and "white women's."

The chief explained: "Too much money, no one stayed home. One Indian girl went into Rocky this spring and traded a coyote skin for a permanent so she could be seen to the Queen, and now all the squaws are trying to have their hair done. Squaws sure getting hard to live with when they want to be like the white women."

Took A Long Chance

Parson Youth Also Ardent To Prove Faith In Prophet
To prove his faith in Zoroaster, the prophet of the Persians, Kay Khushnav Barzoi, Vakil, 20-year-old Parsi son, unveiled four ounces of treasure—enough to kill 80 people—and lives.

"After declaring that he was just a student in your mind, he laid out his head or bag (himself) as he was to take poison. Vakil swallowed the essence in the presence of a large gathering of Parsas, Hindu and Moslems. He took no antidote. The substance which he took was later analyzed and found to be 90.74 arsenical."

May Prove Better Name

"Protektor", the name applied by Germans to dismembered parts of the Czechoslovak republic, has been given a new pronunciation by Slavs. They say "Pro to mto krat", which means "for the time being."

"Jaeger", a black bear at Copeland Lake lodge, Rocky Mountain national park, drinks as many as three dozen bottles of pop in a single day.

CHEETAHS OUTHUN GREYHOUNDS

A display of racing Cheethas amazed the people who travelled to Rushmore Arena at Aldershot to see the animals run in competition with greyhounds. The Cheethas left the greyhounds far behind as they travelled 40 miles an hour.

Want Copy Of Treaty

Indians At The Pas Apply To Governor-General For Assistance
Lord Vredemuir has agreed to assist Indians of the Cree reservation at The Pas, Man., in obtaining a copy of the treaty between Queen Victoria and the Indian chiefs of Canada and has also promised to support their plea to the Dominion government for farming implements.

The Governor-General heard these requests from Chief Louis McMillin when he visited the reserve at The Pas, Man., accompanied by his son, John John Buchan.

"It should not be hard to get a copy of the parchment," Lord Vredemuir told a delegation of 15 Indians headed by Chief McMillin. He pledged consideration of the Indian request that the government encourage them as farming by providing implements.

Delighted news broke out on the reserve when the news reached the Governor-General, remarking that he, too, was a Cree Indian chief attempted to pronounce his tribal name. In English the name means "The Teller of Tales."

After a few unsuccessful efforts to enunciate the clucking syllables, Lord Tweedsmuir turned to his son for assistance. John Buchan's attempts also ended in failure and several of the Indians, led by Rev. H. H. Howard, Anglican missionary on the reserve, chanted the Governor-General's Cree name.

Famous War Order

Earl Hag's, "Back To The Wall" Order For British Musicians
The British musician acquired Earl Hag's famous "Back to the Wall" order of April 11, 1918, under the will of His Philip (husband, Hag's) and retired during part of the Great War.

Hag issued the order after the Germans threw 100 divisions into an effort to separate the British and French, take English Channel ports and annihilate Britain's forces. It read in part:

"Every position must be held to the last man. There must be no retreat. With our backs to the wall, and believing in the justice of our cause, each one of us must fight to the end. The safety of our homes and the freedom of mankind depend alike upon the conduct of each one of us at this critical moment."

Phil Philip, who died June 3, obtained the order at the close of the Great War.

In one year, as many as 30,000 gallons of turpentine have been taken from forests of the United States.

Branch Air Line

Seek Connection Between Lethbridge And Great Falls, Montana
Aventon interests are directing efforts to establish a 200-mile branch line joining Lethbridge, Great Falls, Mont.

Mayor David E. Elton, K.C., of Lethbridge, presented a formal application to the Civil Aeronautics Authority at Washington, D.C., for a route from Great Falls, Mont., to Lethbridge, Alberta, via a branch line to the Democratic Congressmen, James F. O'Connor of Montana and Lawrence Lewis of Colorado also presented applications. American Flying Companies, Island Air Service and Western Air Express, tendered bids for the contract.

Lethbridge is a division point of Trans-Canada Airlines. From its new 70-acre Kenyon Field, officially opened June 7 and named for the famed Air Commodore, H. Hollick-Kenyon, planes hop west to Vancouver and east to Regina and Winnipeg. Regular feeder lines service to Calgary and Edmonton are maintained from Lethbridge. Northern lines from Edmonton reach as far as Alaska.

Great Falls is a strategic American trunk line point and connection with Lethbridge would complete another major Lethbridge route. Vancouver to Seattle and Winnipeg to Fargo, N.D., are the only Western Canada-United States links in operation at present.

Alberta interests may fail to establish a route to the north. It would seriously hinder development of aviation.

For years, "inland" rocks on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains would be much safer for air travel than the exposed coastal route, the theory runs.

Mayors of Great Falls, Calgary and Lethbridge, in congratulatory letters to the Civil Aeronautics Administration, expressed hopes for an early re-establishment of Alberta-Montana service.

Has Large Collection

Wife Of U. S. Senator Is Proud Of Her Elephants
Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the U.S. federal labor administrator, has 385 elephants in the apartment of Mrs. William E. Borah the other night when she was "bummy" at the house.

"But I'm sure she didn't find all of them," lively Mrs. Borah, wife of Idaho Republican senator, laughed the other day. "I think I have about 500 now."

For 20 years, "Little Borah," as friends call the senator's wife—has been collecting elephants. They are not real ones, of course, but very realistic imitations. They range from tiny ivory ones, smaller than her own, to the largest, but she has a few real ones, too. One of her real elephants, a male named Hiram, is used as an extra chair. His name is used as an extra chair. His name is used as an extra chair.

Eleven tiny crystal elephants lined up on a table as so fragile that Hiram, a male named Hiram, is used as an extra chair. His name is used as an extra chair. His name is used as an extra chair.

On the heavy Chinese chests, there are many more elephants, furnished entirely with oriental things—Mrs. Borah has arranged groups of elephants according to size and color.

Mrs. Borah said the senator likes her elephants. But he always explains to guests, she added, that they are hers, not his.

Many Errors Made

People Are Careless When Speaking Of Names In Bible
The Presbyterian Witness says: Mistaken renderings of the Bible are common. Continually one hears of "the wicked and evil man," the whole point of the story lies in the fact that she gave two millions—that she had."

Almost every one, too, will swear to it that Ross sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, although the phrase occurs nowhere in Scripture. And the commonest error of all is the one that Ross sold his country, an idea which we owe to Milton's Paradise Lost, not to the Bible.

Indiscreet Great Britain
The Rajah of Tripura, arriving from Ottawa for a two-day visit, left reports at Montreal that his country and resources would be 100 per cent. behind Great Britain in the event of war. The Rajah, who was an Indian state of 385,000 persons, said he was one of the first in India to offer aid to the British when at the time of the Munich crisis.

"I'll need plenty of tea, tobacco and sugar in trade for dogs with the Hudsons," said Alan, smiling.

"I'll give you plenty of money, but you mustn't show it at Fort George. They'd want to know where you got it. And I don't want them to know this summer that you've met me."

"But what good will that do?" demanded Alan, impatiently. "Your men must have reached East Main before Christmas if they left here in November. Fort George would learn by the Christmas mail that you were in here, somewhere."

McCord nodded. "True, but my men didn't know we were on the Big River headwaters."

"So you don't want Fort George to know just where you are?"

"Exactly. If they learn that you've met me, they might follow you when you come back with the dogs."

"Follow me? Why?" Again suspicion lurked in Alan's mind. "But they may be following your Indians now—if they talked to East Main."

McCord slowly shook his head. "They're not following my Indians."

"You mean you think they've deserted you and—Heather? They'd leave your dogs and money and not come back—leave you here flat without a dog or a man to help you?"

"That's just what I'm saying," demanded Alan, suddenly determined to make an end to this mystery. "When I landed on your door? You met me with a cackled gun. When were you expecting me here? They were bringing back from East Main."

Blair's somber face of McCord relaxed in a smile of amused interest at the dark insinuation. He placed both hands on Alan's wide shoulders. "Blair, now I can understand it all—later. You bring back those dogs this summer and you'll never regret it. I give you my word you'll never regret throwing in with John McCord."

"I'll get the dogs. I need them for myself, anyway," cried the excited boy, finally burying the bridges of his doubt. The lure of this mystery, the magnetism of the blood-laden giant, had won.

And so, on the white shell of the

In the summer, laughed Alan, as the surprised clerk gripped his hands, searching the wind-burned faces for signs of starvation that drove men in to the fur-pots in early spring.

"And you're not starved out, boy?"

"Do we look it? We've come from the headwaters in fifteen days. That's why we look like caribou in fly time."

"But what drove you off your traps then?"

"Occasion," explained Noel. "His 'oh-ho' Wolverine, eh? And you came down on the crest before your grub gave out? Did you bring much fur, lads?" Added the always business-like Scotchman.

"Better hunt than last year. I've got some black marten and fox that'll make your mouth water, Duncan. What's the news from out there?" asked Alan, casually, anxious to learn what the Indians of John McCord had told at East Main.

"Aye, lad, there's plenty of news," answered the clerk. "Rome Indians came out at East Main in December with a pretty tale."

"What about? Starvation at Nicholson?"

"Aye. It seems there ain't enough traders already on this coast. There's another one—in on the headwaters."

"What do you mean—a trader—on the headwaters?"

"He even in last summer by way of Rupert. He located somewhere beyond Nicholson, on these headwaters."

"You hear that Noel?" demanded Alan of the Indian who lounged against the counter running his eye over the trade-goods on the shelves while he listened intently to the conversation. "Duncan says there's a new trader in on the headwaters."

"Ahh-hah! Noel's dark face was a mass of expression in thought and from word. "Ver strange thing!"

"You didn't run into any hunters who knew about this fellow Alan?"

Alan Cameron shook his head while he waited to hear whether McCord's men had deserted him or had started back with the dogs and supplies they had been sent for.

"Well," continued McCord, "the joke is on this trader McCord for the Indians took his dogs and money and headed down the coast for Moose. How he's stranded in there alone, with what do you think. A girl—his daughter. Fanny taking one of her daughters into the wild land!"

Alan followed the other's announcement with an expression of well-learned surprise by his dark features. So, after all, McCord had been deserted by his men as he had thought.

"Pretty tough on a boy," he agreed. "How does he hope to trade in there without help?"

"He can't. He'll be showing up down here this summer, trying to hire it."

The dark-musked ball of April was buried in the drifting dross of the bay when Alan opened the heavy oak door of the Revillon Press and stepped out into the sun of Hudson's Bay settlement.

"Hi-gah! Alan Cameron! What a fine day!" cried a voice from a tall Frenchman, turning from the huge store in the middle of the room and stepping out into the sun.

"Hello, Noel!" "What a fine day!" "Hello, Noel!" "What a fine day!"

"A wonderful good day to our grub and the deer had left the country so we struck for the coast."

Pierre's expression suddenly sobered as he scanned the lean faces of the two men who had come in over the long river trail from the interior.

"But you had enough to get home without it, didn't you?"

Alan thought of the two men and the dog who had barely reached McCord's cabin as he answered: "We met some Indians."

"Good! But you eat being surprised we met tonight. You got a good luck and a fur?"

"Yes, we've got a piece of marten and fox."

The big Pierre's round face lit with pleasure. "Ahh-hah! You make a dog hunt!" He smiled at the youth he had affectionately by the shoulder.

Alan, and there was another wild glad, "Many thanks to you, Pierre. I'll give you, I give you."

Alan's face was stained with color. "How is she?" he asked.

"She's just as well as that," said the big Pierre, who smiled at the Arsenaults. "She's just as well as that."

Rivard's hand felt cold at the thought. Arsenault had had all the first winter to make love to the man's eldest daughter. It was what he had feared.

"Well, upon my soul if it ain't Alan Cameron and Noel! What's bringing you two lads to the coast in April?" exclaimed the speckled Scot behind the fish counter of the trade-room.

"Hello, Duncan! You haven't grown a day older since I saw you."

A Blind Gold Miner

Sightless For Ten Years Drifts And Blasts In Darkness

There's no light on his mine's floor. No sunshine seeps along his two-foot shaft. James Newman drifts and blasts in darkness—just as he has for 10 years.

Newman is sightless, blinded in a blasting mishap in 1919. He waits until his wounds healed, then took he went to his claim and his cabin in the Westrich Mountains just east of Salt Lake City.

Now his mine runs 600 feet into the hillside. He tunneled every inch of it, drilling, blasting, mucking, rail laying and cut cutting. The shaft is eight feet high, planned that way so he won't bump his head.

Newman can tell exactly where his drifts lead off from the main tunnel. Only one factor in his quest for "pay dirt" stumps him—he must depend on friends to describe rock that may contain ore.

He's taken out some gold, but the "strike"—that gold that leads all miners on—still eludes him.

Now 46, Newman, a bachelor, lives alone at his mine, going to "town" about every three months for supplies. Friends marvel at how deftly and quickly he finds his tools and fires his shots.

Strange Tribe

Try To Solve Mystery Of Early Settlers In British Columbia

The progress of prospectors in the Wasa Lake area of central Vancouver Island is being watched by historians who are less interested in the discovery of gold than they are in a clue to the fate of British Columbia's first immigrants.

The mystery is what became of a group of Chinese sent by the British 150 years ago to establish a colony at Nootka, on the west coast of the island. The Chinese were seized by the Spaniards and according to Capt. John Meares, were put to work mining gold.

It is an official record of what happened to these early settlers but native legend says the Chinese withdrew to the interior of the island after a few skirmishes with distrustful coast Indians. They are said to have taken native wives with them.

In the ensuing years there have been recurrent rumors of a strange tribe on Wasa Lake which appeals the coast district. Historians are hoping prospectors may uncover some trace of descendants of the original Chinese.

No Longer Possible

Drivers Cannot Take Chances On Going To Sleep

In several accidents recently, it has been noted that the driver, when he is tired, is liable to fall asleep. In some cases, the result has been a car in the ditch or against a pole, the other occupants of the car being killed or injured. To be a safe driver, it is essential to be alert; driving should not be carried on until one is overtaken by fatigue, under circumstances, it is wise to pull the car to some quiet place and take a nap or at least complete a short rest.

Every year tens of thousands of people wander about the sunken gardens which was once a barren quarry, over the acres of lava, among the moss beds, the rockeries, the water lily pools and the well-kept woods. The Butchart garden has brought a large tourist industry to Vancouver Island but, more important, they have given happiness to many people.

It is good, therefore, to know that Mr. and Mrs. Butchart have arranged that the beautiful thing they have created with their money, their thought and labor, shall be preserved in perpetuity—Vancouver Sun.

Laws Against Eating

Old Regulations In Britain Curtailed Quantity And Class Of Food

The recent Nazi view that overeating is a form of high treason re-echoes the sentiment in England, some 500 years ago, overeating, if not high treason, was legally a crime. Until July, 1880, it was technically unlawful for a man to have more than two courses at dinner and supper, although upon special festive occasions he might be permitted three. This statute of Edward III's supplementary laws was not repealed until 1880.

In England severe summary laws were enacted in the reign of Edward III. Edward IV. and Henry VIII. put a man dead to eat what he fancied. The poorer classes, for instance, were forbidden to eat certain foods and wheaten bread. That was reserved for "their betters"—the poor being permitted to eat only coarse bread made from pease-meal and other unattractive substances—Manchester Guardian.

At the greatest known ocean depths there is a pressure of six tons to each square inch of surface.

Home-made bread ages more in one day than home-made bread does in six days.

Australia is 97 per cent British in its population.

No Good For Souvenirs

New Type Hotel Towel Too Big To

A Cleveland hotelman has invented a snitch-proof, wear-resistant bath towel and thereby will likely earn for himself a place of honor on history's hall of fame.

Instead of a single-unit towel, as is usual, the idea is to make the towel in sections so that worn areas may be replaced without discarding the entire piece. Better still, the towels are four feet wide and five feet long, and anyone who has ever packed a suitcase knows that, with the generous capacity of modern luggage, 45 square feet of terry cloth is entirely too much to carry away for a souvenir.

It looks as if the ancient and "homemade" company of towel-makers will soon have to disband. It is a strange company, too. Citizens who would not even dream of lifting a towel from a store counter think nothing of tucking in their suitcase an identical article. It is in hanging towels that the real trouble begins. By repeated and frequent practice of a few daring snitch, social conventions change, and perhaps for this reason most hotel linen has found its way into strangers' homes. The practice has become a habit, and the hotelman, who has nothing of the stigma of petty crime.

So the giant towels will not only be a good idea for the hotelman, but will also prevent a mite of sinning among its guests. Like a child's appetite in a burglar who grows too large to be of further use to his master, the hotel towel is talking on proportions that will ensure its undisturbed existence on its own shelf.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Arithmetic Of Driving

Automobile drivers who divide their attention multiply tragedies, add death, sorrow and suffering and subtract from the safety, peace and happiness of their fellow beings. Keep your mind on your own car, and your own safety, and the safety of others.

"The Star Maker"

The Young People of Gordon Memorial Church held a very interesting Gypsy Tea on the Church lawn last Wednesday evening. An exceptionally good crowd turned out and thoroughly the entertainment provided. It was splendidly arranged and well carried through. The tea-cup and palm reading by the colorfully dressed Gypsies with the gaily decorated tables and electric lights were all greatly enjoyed. But the best of it all was that the Young People were successful in reaching their objective—namely, the raising of the desired amount required for the payment of the taxes on the church property.

Apart from the excitement over the War News, Labor Day passed off very quietly here.
